Psychosocial Disability – What is it?

- For some people, living with a severe mental health issue can make it hard to do everyday things and participate in the community.
- They may have trouble concentrating, getting organised or interacting with others, without support. These issues can be life-long, even if they fluctuate.
- Not everyone who has a mental health issue will have a psychosocial disability. People may have the same diagnosis but it impacts on them differently.

How is a Psychosocial disability different from a mental health issue

A mental health issue is a:

- Diagnosed condition

That can:

- Affect ones mood, thinking and behavior

A psycho social disability is:

- The functional impact as a result of the person mental health issue.

Unpacking what Psycho social supports look like
